WEATHER

Northern California

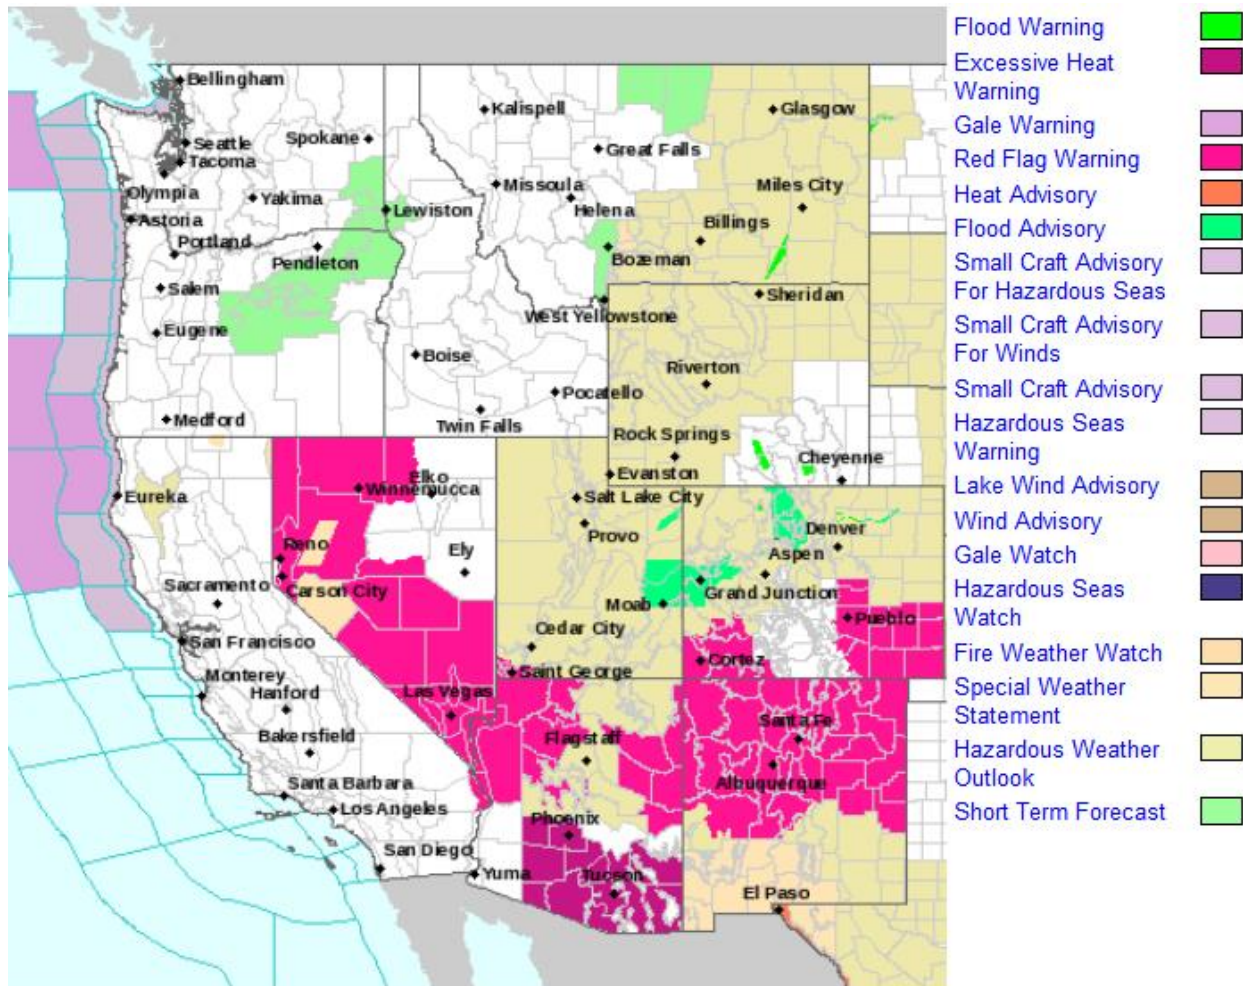

A small, relatively weak weather system will move across Northern California today. This system will bring some afternoon and evening thunderstorms to the northern and eastern mountains.

Thunderstorms will be isolated and have will produce precipitation, although they will be drier near the Nevada border. Some moderately strong, gusty westerly winds will develop this afternoon east of the Cascade/Sierra crest that will lead to a low Relative Humidity (RH). Higher pressure will be in place Wednesday, and some overnight northerly winds will also develop. Inland areas are likely to warm up under this pattern.

Southern California

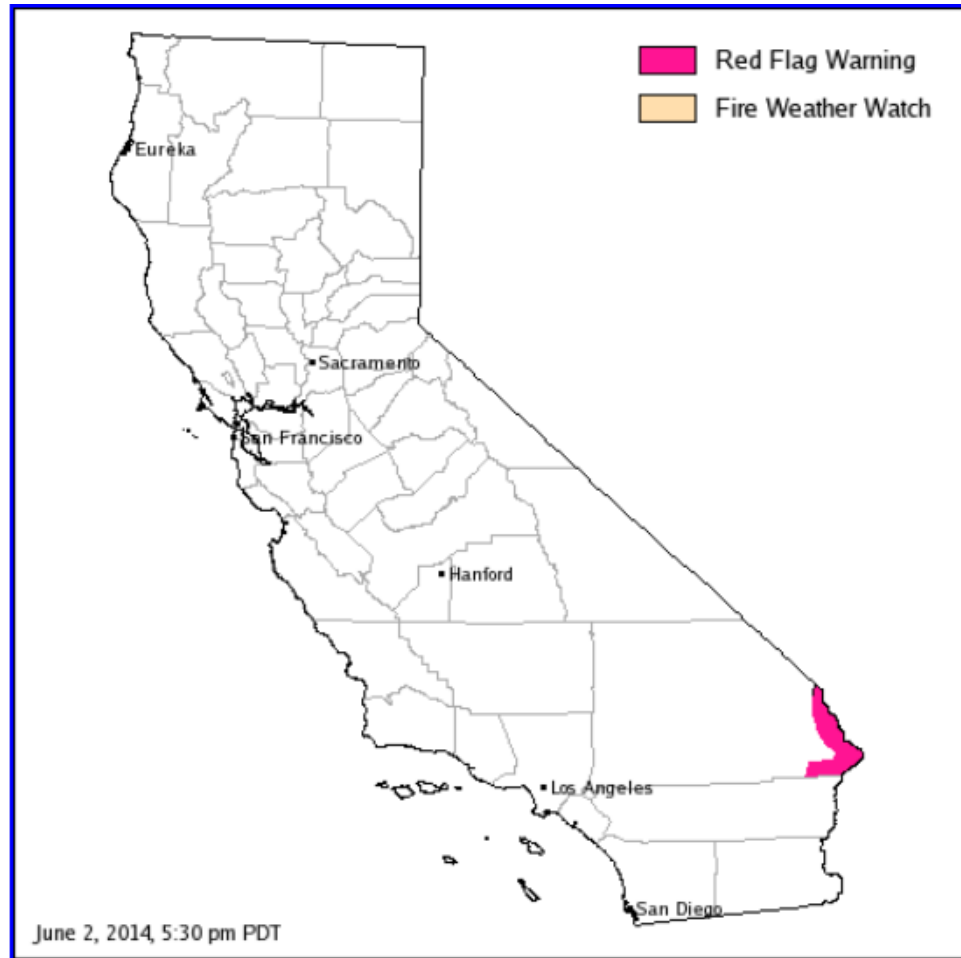

A weak trough moving inland over Central California will see increased westerly afternoon winds today. Winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will occur across the desert passes and a 10 to 18 mph sea breeze will push inland from the coast this afternoon. This trough will also bring a couple degrees of cooling today with 70s to low 80s in the mountains and mid 80s to low 90s in the valleys. A weak ridge of high pressure will replace the trough bringing slightly warmer temperatures to Southern California Tuesday through Friday. Westerly afternoon winds across the desert passes will decrease Tuesday through Friday. A strong ridge of high pressure will build northward from Mexico bringing well above normal temperatures and light winds this weekend.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

Situational Summary

On January 17, 2014 Governor Edmund G. Brown proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for drought conditions. The State Operation Center (SOC) is activated to implement objectives in support of the Governor's priorities. The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in extremely dry conditions in many parts of the State. Reservoir levels are down significantly from where they should be on average for this time of year. If conditions continue without substantial rainfall, severe impacts to municipal water supplies, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities are likely in store for the State over the next few months. Negative economic impacts will also result.

*As our state's rainy season comes to an end, it is highly unlikely that precipitation totals will increase significantly. This winter's below average rain and snowfall worsens conditions in this third straight dry year.

The drought could result in severe impacts to the municipal water supplies, wells, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities for several months. The SOC continues to be activated to monitor the situation statewide, and support regional and local operational areas.

- The Taskforce continues to meet regularly to take actions that conserve water and coordinate state response to the drought.
- The final manual snowpack survey of the season was conducted on Thursday (May 1) and showed California snowpack at 18% of normal. A more recent update using automated devices shows snowpack at 3% of normal as of May 30.
- DWR has announced that water essential for health and safety will be delivered through the state water project. The current State Water Project Allocation is 5%.
- Cal OES continues to gather drought-related costs from state agencies and local governments.
